WOODLOT FORESTRY.

Simple Directions for Caring for the Wood Supply on the Farm.

Every Farmer May Have Permanent Timber Supply for Future Use.

Throughout a large portion of the Eastern States nearly every farm has its woodlot. From that woodlot, which is often all that remains of the vast forests which originally clothed the region, the farmer supplies his own needs, furnishes him with fence posts, rails, poles, and even with timber, boards, and shingles to keep the farm buildings in repair. A well managed woodlot is therefore a very valuable part of the farm, and the sum total of all farm woodlots represents a very large national asset.

The U. S. Forest Service has for some years devoted special attention to the needs of woodlot owners. Its cooperation is offered to all who would have advice on the management of woodlots, and many thousands of farm forests are now actually cared for under practical systems of forestry which it has recommended.

As a general rule, but little care is devoted to the woodlot. It is left to shift for itself, is often used too freely for the pasture of live stock, and is rarely guarded from fire or forest enemies. When wood is needed but little discretion is exercised in the choice of trees, and no need is felt of providing for the renewal or improvement of the stand.

If it is decided simply matter to care for the woodlot, the owner need not burden himself with any elaborate system. Nor need he, in most cases, reduce the amount of timber which he cuts. Eventually, of course, he can cut more, for more will be grown. The first requirement of the ordinary woodlot is protection, and the second, selection in cutting.

Fires are the chief enemy of the woodlot. If hollow logs or stumps are left, they will begin to die in the tops, reducing their value when cut; but the greatest harm is done to reproduction and the growth of young trees. Running over the forest soil, they consume the litter and kill the seedlings. The forest soil becomes too dry to encourage the germination of tree seeds. Even if seedlings succeed in finding root and begin to flourish, the next fire destroys them.

Fires may easily be kept out of the woodlot with a little care. They are often started to improve the grazing and pasture. This is certainly poor policy. While the grazing may be improved for a few years, the woodlot is often permanently injured. It is generally a poor plan to expect land to produce grass and wood at the same time. Neither will do well, and the owner will be paying taxes on land which he only half uses. Grazing animals often do much injury to the woodlot. They break up great trunks, and damage it down. They also pack the soil with their hoofs, destroying its power to retain moisture and encouraging the entrance of grass. Grazing should be watched, and should be permitted in the woodlot only when such harm will not result.

In cutting, the first thing to look for is the young growth. The whole point of forest management is to have new trees of the most useful kind take the place of the old, just as soon as possible, and to make one good, healthy stroke of the ax will get rid of a fine sapling half the size of a man's wrist, if it is a little in the way, and a dozen years of growth is lost. On the other hand, the cutting of a good tree may simply open room for worthless trees to take its place.

In some regions care must be taken not to permit the crown cover to become too open. In a good forest the soil will be soft and moist, and its soil condition is essential if the trees are to thrive and make rapid growth. The exposure of the soil to the sun dries out the young growth as though by fire, while the trees tend to become branched if they stand too far apart.

Past neglect has produced many woodlots in which the healthy trees of the best kinds are choked with unsound and dead trees and trees of inferior kinds. For such case improvement cuttings are needed. It will pay to spend the time and labor necessary to remove the dead, crooked and diseased trees, together with the weed trees, so that the remaining stand may be composed of good timber trees in sufficient number, under conditions favorable for their development. This can be done gradually, as the material can be utilized.

When once the improvement cutting has brought the woodlot into business like shape, further operations should be made with a view to reproduction and a lasting supply. Care should be taken in felling, working up, and hauling out wood to do as little damage as possible to young growth. If reproduction is to take place, plant seed, the proper location of seed trees must be considered.

Where the forest is composed mainly of such trees as oak and chestnut, which sprout well from the stump, it may be advisable to cut most of the good-sized trees, over a part of the woodlot, for the purpose of raising a crop of sprouts. Such sprout grow rapidly and produce good poles, posts, and ties at a comparatively early age. But the stumps should be cut low and slanting, so as prevent rotting and secure strong and numerous shoots.

There are a number of thinning systems some of which may suit the requirements of one woodlot but not those of another. By a careful reading of Bulletin No. 42 of the Forest Service, entitled "The Woodlot," the owner can familiarize himself with these and choose whichever one his woodlot and observation suggest as the best. Or, should the owner desire a special plan for the management of his woodlot, he should make application to the Forester, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the cooperation of the Forestry Service.

JOINED HER LOVER.

Suicide of Miss Ruby Ross, of Richland County.

Miss Ruby Ross, of the Richland community, and a member one of the best families there, committed suicide at her home last Thursday morning by blowing out her brains.

A month ago Jack Wyatt, with whom she was in love and Robert Jones, another suitor, fought a duel over her at Beulah school house and Wyatt was killed.

Since then on several occasions she had declared her intention to join her lover.

The following statement was found among the effects of Miss Ruby Ross who recently committed suicide:

"Thursday, Nov. 23, 1905. This day I die. I can not live owing to what has been done I never knew what trouble was until my dearest lover was shot and had to die from the wounds of the fatal gun in the hands of a cruel man, who will have to suffer for this terrible crime, for it being nothing more than cold-blooded murder. It was not done in self-defense as he states, for the precious boy was armed not at all, and had no way nor time to defend himself in any manner until he lay shot and bleeding upon the ground with three pistol wounds in his previous torso. Now this is why I die. I can not live without him who has gone on before. Now I do not want you all to grieve for me, for I am going to rest with the one I love dearer than I do my life. That is why I die. Now give Ethel Wyatt my watch, which was the request of a precious one gone on before and my also. If I live after this shot I want Mr. Wyatt's family at my bedside, and Aunt Martha and Bro. Clark to preach my funeral. You know where my grave is to be—close to my dearest lover as it can be got out, and he put in the same pen. As that is all I can think of I will say good bye to one and all forever. I'll be as one that loves the departed dearer than life, as that is why I die."

"N. B. If you have a heart get the one that Bob was hauled away in. This being my last request. I wish my father and mother were at home. Good-bye, good-bye."

NO VIVI VOCE VOTE FOR KENTUCKY.

Official Vote Overwhelmingly Against Change of Present System.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 27.—Notwithstanding the strong Democratic advocacy of a return to the old open ballot system of voting, Secretary of State McChesney's returns show ninety-four counties reporting 94,449 against and 55,578 for the vivi voce constitutional amendment. This will be the lawful result, as the law requires the election commissioners to certify the result today. The counties not reporting to this time will be recorded as unofficial. The vote has been certified to Secretary of Election Commission Phillips, and will be attested by the State Board.

Acted Suspiciously.

Sunday night a little after dark Mrs. Y. Q. Walker noticed a man acting in a suspicious manner in the alley between her residence and that of Jeff Murphy. He was in a crouching position and seemed to be watching some one in Murphy's house. Mrs. Walker called to her husband who came out, but by this time the man had apparently disappeared. Mrs. Murphy came out the back door by this time and Mrs. Walker said to her "there was a man watching you through the window and as you went from one room to the other he crept along the fence following." By this time Mrs. Walker had gotten out in the lane and almost ran over the man who was still hidden, by the fence. Of course she screamed, Mrs. Murphy also screamed and her husband ran out in the yard and asked the man what he wanted there. He made no reply and kept standing. Murphy then said to his wife "go and get my gun and I will find out what he wants." The stranger said "Ob, I don't think there will be any shooting done here. Don't get excited, there is no harm done," and walked off up the road. No one has any idea who he is, what he wanted or where he went.

A Christmas Bazaar

for the young and old will be given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, South, Friday evening, Dec. 8, at the Academy. Do not purchase your Xmas gifts till you have seen the many pretty and useful articles on sale at this bazaar.

Coffee, cocoa and cake will be served.

Come prepared to enjoy yourself, bringing your sunny manners, happy smiles and Xmas money. Everyone invited. Admission free.

The special Thanksgiving service at the E. C. Church, Smith, will be very interesting and it is to be hoped that a large crowd will attend. Rev. King will preach a short appropriate sermon. All are requested to bring an offering of thanks, of any amount they feel justified in giving.

A certain little girl became possessed, all on one day, of a baby brother and a puppy. The puppy was a valuable addition to the week past and the puppy had caused "Scots," while the baby was still unnamed. The minister, happening to meet the little girl on the road one afternoon, asked her what was that the puppy had a name and the baby had none. "Why, Scott has a pedigree," said she.

Although not yet perfected, the Maj-ram telephone bids fair vastly to extend the field of usefulness of the long-distance telephone by reducing audible vibrations too faint to activate the jaws of the ordinary receiver or even the microphone instruments.

COL. HINDMAN RESIGNS.

W. B. Haldeman Asked to Accept Place Political Complications.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 28.—Col. Biscoe Hindman has resigned as colonel of the First Kentucky regiment and Wm. B. Haldeman has been asked by a committee of officers to accept the office. Col. Bennett H. Young and Col. Morris B. Bullock were also spoken of for the place. The officers agree that it is necessary to have a prominent democratic politician for colonel in order to keep in proper touch with Frankfort. It is remarked that Mr. Haldeman has recently announced his candidacy for the United States Senatorship and that Gov. Beckham, who made the appointment for the colony, is supporting Judge Payne for the Senatorship.

Big Edition.

Advertisers will do well to take advantage of the Christmas edition of The Bee, to be issued on Dec. 14th. This edition will consist of 24 or more pages, including the illustrated front page, which will be a beautiful picture of the "Nativity" in colors. The other pages will be filled with local, general and foreign news, illustrated short stories and verse suitable for the holidays.

There will be 8000 papers issued, which will be equal to 9000 pages of The Bee's regular size. This edition will come out just in time to catch the Christmas shopper, and advertisers will make no mistake by buying space in this paper. It reaches over eight thousand people, who have regular work, draw good wages and, consequently, have money to spend. Put an advertisement in The Bee and watch your business increase.

Special Service.

The night service at the Christian church next Sunday will be devoted to the interests of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. A special program has been prepared consisting of singing, scripture reading, prayers and short papers. At the close an offering will be taken which is to be devoted to building and equipping a boy's dormitory at Morehead Normal, one of the Kentucky mountain schools sustained by the organization.

McNair-Peyton.

Mrs. Hettie McNair and Mr. Lee Peyton, both of this city, were united in marriage at the Northern Methodist parsonage by Rev. Dame at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kissenger and is a well known young lady. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Radie Peyton and an employee of the St. Bernard Mining Company.

Receives Call to Madisonville.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 27.—The Rev. J. M. Jones, assistant pastor of the Baptist church of this city, has received a call from the Baptist church at Madisonville, and he will probably accept, as the salary offered is a handsome increase over the one he receives here and the call is in the nature of a material advancement in church work.

Died at Barnsley.

Sampson Platt, an aged citizen of Barnsley, died at that place Tuesday morning of Bright's disease. He was formerly employed by the St. Bernard Mining Company, but has for several years been unable to work.

NISBET-MILLS.

Prominent Young People Wed.

Walter J. Nisbet, of Providence, and Miss Emma Mills, of Madisonville, were married at the residence of the bride's parents on North and Main streets.

They are both well known young people, Miss Mills being a daughter of Mr. J. R. Mills, a prominent business man of that place.

The groom is one of Webster county's prominent and influential citizens who has for a number of years been president of the Providence Coal Company. He is a son of W. A. Nisbet, of Madisonville. Rev. McCaul, the Baptist minister, of Providence, performed the ceremony in the presence of the family and a few invited friends.

Opened.

Misses Minnie Rich and Hallie Clark came over from Madisonville last Monday evening pretending to spend the night with Mrs. Mary Stone. After supper a merry crowd assembled around the fireside with music and singing. In a short time Misses Rich and Clark were missing and did not return. It was discovered next morning that Mr. Charles Johnson drove from White Plains the night before and took the ladies to Nortowne and took the train there for Illinois where Mr. Johnson and Miss Rich were married. The happy couple returned to the groom's home at White Plains Wednesday. The bride is a charming young lady of Madisonville and has many friends there. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Rich and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Polk Merrill. Their many friends extend congratulations.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Erlington Commandery No. 525.

Whereas, In the providence of God our friend and brother, James G. Ward, was called to eternal rest, on the 17th day of November 1905.

First. That in his death the lodge has lost a worthy brother; his home a kind husband and loving father, the community an honorable and upright citizen.

Second. That as members of the Golden Coss we tender to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, printed in the Erlington Bee and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

First Thanksgiving Dinner.

The first Thanksgiving dinner was celebrated in this country 277 years ago at Plymouth, Mass. The whole American army was present. It numbered 20 men. Miles Standish, the backward lover of Priscilla, sat at the feast while Priscilla served at the tables.

An Error.

In last week's Bee it was stated through a typographical error that the amount of insurance carried by Ed. Tanner in Ben Hur Lodge was $220. This should have been $2,250.00.

GRANGE AGAINST LABOR UNIONS.

Patrons of Husbandry Against Fixing an Eight Hour Day.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 28.—Before adjourning sine die this evening the National Grange Patrons of Husbandry adopted a resolution declaring "That we, as American citizens, believe it is every man's privilege to work as many hours as he will for pay and that energy, thrift and activity are entitled to encouragement, and should command rightfull compensation for services rendered." This is taken as a direct aim at labor unions which fix on eight hours for a working day, and may mean a contest between the farmers and organized labor.

Miss Alpha Beal Entertains.

A party was given Friday night, Nov. 24, 1905, at the home of Miss Alpha Beal, 806 Cumberland ave., Howell.

The home was beautifully decorated, red and green being the colors, and cut flowers. Oranges and bananas served as refreshments. The young ladies present were Misses Mirtie Gilbreath, Mamie Gilbreath, Annie Kelley, Lallia Clark, Esther Cox, Ethel Schenck, Dora Morse, Lola Yearwood, Mamie Kelley, Addie Smith, Rose Newman, Annie Bobb, Mamie Braher, Georgia Yearwood and Nellie Shields.

The gentlemen present were: Messrs. Walden Gilbreath, Walter Yearwood, Carless Wright, Edgar Kelley, Garland Hartman, Criss Wright, Frank Edmondson, William Dickman, Dillon Bonnberger, Ed. Russler, Robert Clark and Messrs. Kelly and Centry.

Fire at Henderson.

The city of Henderson was visited by fire at an early hour Saturday morning and the livery stable of J. T. Hopewell and a blacksmith shop owned by Alex Henderson were destroyed before the fire was extinguished. Considerable damage was done to several other buildings. The estimated loss is about $7,000 with no insurance. Five horses together with a number of hacks, wagons and vehicles in the stable were burned. The fire originated in the rear of the stable and is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

Thanksgiving Thursday.

The fact that Thanksgiving day has nearly always been held on a Thursday is curious, but there seems to be no real explanation of the fact except that of custom. This Thursday thread might, a thousand years or so ago, have been explained as some sort of step toward propitiation of Thor, the Thunderer, whose day it is, but the American holiday hardly runs back far enough to admit of such an explanation.

"The greatest fun that I ever had in my life I got through another man who the man was," declared La Dell Price, the fat little German with the loose trousers, long hair and a bunch of whiskers in "Hans 'n Nix," a comedy built on similar lines of the old "Wee Willie Winkie." "I happened this way," said Dixon, "I got to a little function over in Philadelphia, at which wine flowed rather freely, and when I boarded a Pennsylvania train in the wee small hours to go back to New York, I was just the least bit drowsy. I threw my overcoat over the back of a seat, placed my ticket where the conductor could get it without disturbing me, and immediately proceeded to fall off into a doze. When the train arrived in Jersey City, I was awakened by the porter, and hastily grabbing what I took to be my coat, made my way off the train. After pulling myself together, I reached back for the pocket book, I didn't find it, and encountered instead a few bills. I wondered for a few moments how they could have got there, and then, on examining the coat closely, found that some one had exchanged with me. I put the money back in the pocket and for some months carried it without touching it, excepting one day to see the advertisement in the newspapers for the coat. However, when a long time slipped by and no call was made for the garment or the money, I proceeded to spend the money and never enjoyed anything half so well. About four months after the occurrence, I was again in the station at Philadelphia, when a woman came up to me, surveyed me critically, declared: "Give me my coat; here's your 'un," and proceeded to take off the coat that had disappeared from me four months previous. I gave him his garment, but before I had time to frame an explanation for the disappearance of the money, he was gone, and I never heard or saw him since.

PERSONALS

MRS. JNO. G. MORTON

Dies After a Brief Illness, Though in Poor Health for Years.

Her Girlhood Home Was in the Heart of Earlington's Present Site.

Mrs. Morton, wife of James G. Morton, the pioneer banker of Madisonville, died about noon on Tuesday, November 28th. The end came with unexpected suddenness, although Mrs. Morton had been in poor health for several years and had grown weaker upon the attack of a throat trouble that had been trouble some in the past. After a brief illness, she became unconscious and sank rapidly to the end. The deceased was seventy six years old.

Mrs. Morton was, before her marriage, Miss Elizabeth Young, daughter of the late Crutchfield Young, whose homestead has since become the center of the business section of the city of Earlington. The Young home indeed stood exactly on the spot now occupied by the residence of Mr. Jno. B. Atkinson. It was here that Miss Young, who was looked upon as the most beautiful young woman in the whole country, was engaged to wed by the young farmer, who was afterward to become one of the most potent financial factors in Western Kentucky.

Elizabeth Young was born in May, 1820. She was married, at the age of seventeen, to John G. Morton on Dec. 26, 1840. Their home was made on a farm west of Earlington, in the first frame house built in this section of the country; the house that later became generally known as the "white house." The remnants of this house were torn away within the past fifteen years.

There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Morton, six children, Chas. E., David A., Mary, Helen, Elizabeth and William C., in order of age, the three eldest of whom are dead. Those of the family who survive are the husband, Mr. John G. Morton, who has kept his strength well most of the eighty-four years of his life, Mrs. John G. Hall, Mrs. Joel McPherson and Mr. W. C. Morton, all of Madisonville. Mrs. Morton is also survived by one brother, Mr. Caleb Young, of Madisonville.

The funeral services which were held yesterday afternoon at the family residence, were simple, as typifying the simple, peaceful, helpful life just ended. The Rev. S. F. Fowler, of the Christian church, who officiated, spoke of the quiet deeds of love and usefulness with which her life had been filled. The deceased had been a member of the Grange congregation for thirty years and her remains were taken care of burial alongside of those of her children and relatives.

The pall bearers were C. O. Osburn, Turner Ruby, H. H. Holman, Claude L. Ross, Clint Ruby, Ashley Holloman, I. Bailey and Ernest Anderson.

There were numerous floral tributes and the funeral was largely attended by friends and relatives from all over Hopkins county.

Are You One Of the Few?

FEW parents take sufficient care in selecting CLOTHING for their BOYS.

MANY seem to think as he's only a BOY, just any old-thrown-together-thing will do.

A seriously sad mistake we think.

"As the twig is bent the tree is inclined."

Dress a boy slovenly, carelessly, kinder slip-shod, and nine times out of ten that's the kind of a man he'll be.

On the other hand, SEE to it that his clothing is well made—of stylish cut—that the fabric used resembles that worn by the leading young men of the day—and you have our word for it—he will develop into a man of whom you shall be proud in your latter days.

We take great care in buying clothing for our Boy's Department. Our BEST clothes stand second to none. You can spot one of our suits whenever you see it. There is a tone, a character in it, attractive, and this same effect is imparted to the wearer.

You would have your boy appear the BEST, would you not? Are anxious to have him respected, and self-respecting? Then dress him in our clothes.

In the collar, the lappel, the shoulder, the front, in the whole suit, there is a distinction you will thank us for.

LOCOMOTIVE BLASTS

Origin of Railway Whistles.

Locomotives, seventy-five years ago, had no whistles. The engineer kept by his side a tin horn, which he blew before curves and dangerous crossings.

But the noise was too feeble. In 1833 an English farmer's cart was run down on the way to market and 1,000 eggs, 100 pounds of butter, two horses and a man were lumped in one great omelet on the rails. The railway had to pay the damages.

The President sent for George Stevenson, the inventor of the locomotive, and said angrily:

"Our engineers can't blow their horns loud enough to clear the tracks ahead. You have made your steam do so much why don't you make it blow a good, loud horn for us?"

Stevenson pondered. He visited a musical instrument maker and had constructed a horn that gave a horrible screech when blown by steam. From this the locomotive whistle of today descends.
